Fear Radical Attempts on Other U. S. Ambassadors; Embassies Being Guarded

Threatening Letters Received At Paris, Brussels And Rome

HERRICK UNPERTURBED

Authorities Place Heavy Guards at Brussels and Rome Legations

BY WILLIAM COOK
Staff Correspondent I. N. S.

PARIS, Oct. 20—A systematic campaign of terrorism against American diplomats in continental Europe by Communists is in full swing today. Following the attempt to assassinate Myron T. Herrick American ambassador to France, reports were received here that hostile demonstrations had been made against the American legation in Brussels. Death threats have been received in letters by the American diplomatic envoys in Paris, Brussels and Rome.

The demonstrations constituted a protest by European communists against the conviction in Massachusetts of Niccolo Sacco and Bartolomoe Vanetti, two Italians, for the murder of Frederick A. Parmenter, paymaster of a shoe concern at Braintree.

Extra police guards were thrown about the American embassy in this city and a bodyguard has been provided for Ambassador Herrick. Communist centers are being searched by the police for the ringleaders in the bomb plot against the diplomats life.

The communist newspaper Humanite boldly stated that it was "dissatisfied with the effect of the bomb" and printed a summons to a monster mass meeting Friday to be followed by another on Sunday. These meetings, said, the newspaper, will demand a reprieve for the "two innocent martyrs in America who are victims of an infamous capitalistic conspiracy."

Marcel Cachin, communist member of the Chamber of Deputies said he was in no way responsible for the attack on Ambassador Herrick. "It is true" said M. Cachin, "that I wrote some articles in which I said that the American embassy has received numerous protests which had remained unanswered and that I said that the time had come to act. I was merely thinking of the mass meeting of protest when I wrote that. The mass meeting on Friday is perfectly legal."

Mr. Herrick went about his duties as usual today. He received many congratulations from friends in France and America upon his escape.

Police prefect Leullier, who is personally investigating the crime, told the International News Service he had found the bomb was mailed at the Rue Pontoise postoffice station, in the Latin Quarter. One theory is the sender may have posed as one of the great numbers of students of all nationalities who live in the Latin quarter.

Mr. Herrick told the police prefect he was still receiving threatening letters.

BRUSSELS, Oct. 20—A heavy police guard was put around the United States legation here today as the result of a hostile demonstration by Communists.

Crowds surged before the legation shouting: "Release Sacco and Vanzetti" They grew so threatening that extra policemen were rushed to the scene and the mobs were dispersed with batons.

ROME, Oct. 20—The police were engaged today in attempting to trace the origin of threatening letters which have been sent to Richard Washburn Child, the American ambassador. They are also seeking the source which inspired hostile communist demonstrations against the embassy. Extra guards have been placed about the embassy and the police have offered a bodyguard to the American diplomat News of an attack against the life of Myron T. Herrick, the American ambassador at Paris, has increased the anxiety here. Italian Communists are demanding the release of two Italians who were convicted to murder at Braintree, Mass—Niccolo Sacco and Bartolomeo Conzetti Erroneous report has been current here that the men have already been executed.

The Rev. J. J. Bingham, pastor of Methodist Church, will give an illustrated lecture entitled "Story of Marine Brigade." The date is November 10th.

Employes Accept Wage Cut

The employees of the Sunbury Converting Works voted to accept a wage cut ranging from five to 10 per cent., rather than have some workers laid off.

Pennsylvania Disputes Jurisdiction of Body to Intervene in Agreement

ISSUES STATEMENT

BY LUTHER A. HUSTON
Staff Correspondent I. N. S.

CHICAGO, Oct. 20—The Pennsylvania Railroad today denied the jurisdiction of the United States railway labor board to intervene in the dispute between the road and its employes over the election of employe representatives to deal with the company with regard to rules and working conditions.

In a statement read to the board by C. V. Heiserman, attorney for the road, it was asserted that the Pennsylvania had violated no order of the board. The statement was prepared by Samuel Rea, president of the Pennsylvania and approved by the board of directors.

"There is not much to say but the situation looks stormy," was the comment made by one of the railway brotherhood chiefs on his arrival here. W. S. Stone, president of the brotherhood of engineers; W. S. Carter, of the firemen and T. C. Cashen, president of the switchmen's union of North America, were the first of the brotherhood heads to arrive from Cleveland.

Cashen was the only leader who would make a statement.

"I don't know," he said, "whether Governor Hooper's proposition is to be regarded as official but I will say that we have performed a valuable public service if we can get freight rates reduced. We have already forced the admission that they ought to be reduced."

Rea's statement admitted that the labor board has jurisdiction over rules and working conditions. It was contended however, that the present dispute dealt with a matter of procedure and the right of the board to decide methods of compliance with its rules was denied. The statement contended that compliance with the order of the board directing the Pennsylvania to call a new election of employes representatives would compel the road to deal with shop-crafts organizations that would impair its usefulness and value. The shop-crafts Rea asserted, stand for the closed shop, the sympathetic strike and limitation of output, three principles which Rea asserted were incompatible with efficient operation.

"What difference do you see in the culpability of a railroad in refusing to obey a decision of a board authorized by an act of congress and the culpability of the unions in calling a strike?" Hooper asked.

Heiserman declined to answer, saying:

"You and I are so far apart that it is useless to enter into any discussion."

The Pennsylvania representatives flatly refused to agree to obey the order of the board to call a new election contending that the authority of the board was not administrative but mediatory.

Harding Bases Strike Solution On Conference

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20—Returning to Washington today to find little or no change in the railroad strike situation, President Harding will wait with other government officials the announcement of the success or failure of the conference scheduled in Chicago between the United States Railroad Labor Board and the chiefs of the "Big Four" transportation brotherhoods.

The administration is understood to entertain no fears as to the ability of the government to handle the railroad dilemma in the event of a nation-wide strike, but is represented as being desirous of exhausting every possible means of avoiding a walk-out by voluntary arbitration before resorting to compulsion or actual intervention.

Officials feel that the differences of railroad executives and their employes over wages and working conditions may be reconciled more readily and with greater satisfaction to all concerned if the hand of the government is not seen as the guiding force in the adjustment of the quarrel.

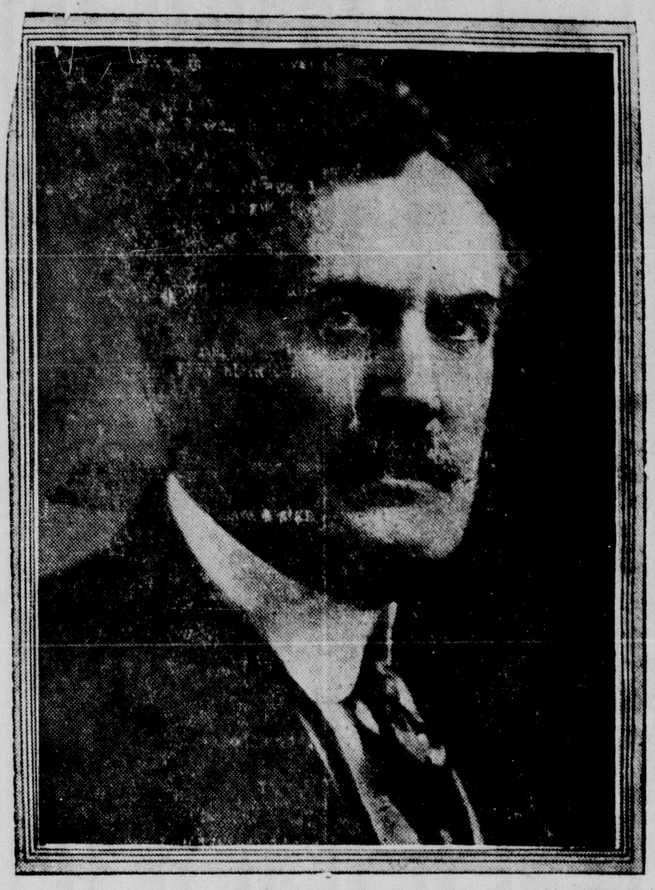

It is now up to the railroad labor board, and officialdom's outward confidence is based on the hope—forlorn

State Educational Chief To Be Star at Institute

Dr. Finegan Will Be Among a Galaxy of Speakers at Annual Symposium of Bucks County Pedagogues.

Teachers in the public schools of Bristol and other sections of Bucks County are preparing to attend the teachers' annual institute, which opens at Doylestown October 31st, and continues for a week. The schools here will be closed during that period.

Dr. Thomas E. Finegan, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, will attend the Institute, and will address the Directors' Day audience Wednesday afternoon. The directors of the county will meet on Wednesday instead of Thursday.

County Superintendent J. H. Hoffman has a strong corps of instructors, who will take up important branches of the work. They include the following in addition to Dr. Finegan.

Mrs. H. C. Fetterolf, of Camp Hill, who spoke last year at Institute, and whose work in rural schools has been notably successful. She will also speak before the directors. Her work is directed toward improvement of primary schools.

Miss Margaret Maguire, principal of the George A. McCall School, Philadelphia, will speak on Thursday. Miss Maguire is one of the foremost educators of the State and is well known throughout Bucks county.

Dr. Byron M. King, head of the King School of Oratory, besides being an evening lecturer, will address the day session of the institute on reading, speech defects and literature.

Dr. C. H. Keene, director of the Bureau of Health of the Board of Education, will speak to directors and teachers about "The Health of Pupils," touching it from the medical rather than the sanitary side.

Dr. John G. Ziegler, superintendent of school sanitation will speak to the directors and teachers along that line.

V. Valentine Kirby, of the Department of Art, will speak on art in the schools, the buildings and their surroundings.

Miss Selma M. Konold, Harrisburg, who was an assistant to Dr. Hollis Dan, will spend two days with the sections, speaking on rural school and high school music.

Prof. Ted Griffith, of Edwardsville, will have charge of the music.

Evening events of the week will be as follows:

Monday: Dr. Byron M. King, will give a lecture-recital.

Tuesday: Recital by the Philadelphia Male Quartette, composed of Charles Stahl, tenor; Philip Warren Cooke, tenor; Harold Albert Simonds, baritone; John Vanderslott, bass; Miss Loretta Kirk, reader.

Wednesday: Lecture, Dr. Thomas E. Green, "In This Thy Day."

Thursday: Lecture, Dr. Preston Bradley, "The United States of Tomorrow."

Army Auto Cut Capers When Parked On Radcliffe Street

A Dodge touring car belonging to the U. S. Army detail at the Tullytown arsenal went on a rampage yesterday afternoon. The machine was parked in front of the office of the East Pennsylvania Gas & Electric Company, on Radcliffe street, while H. Yates the driver was inside.

Yates claims that he applied the brakes before leaving the car, but they must have slipped, for the car ran down grade across Radcliffe street and crashed into the iron railing in front of the ticket booth of the now unoccupied Riverside movie theatre. The railing was demolished.

Merchants Plan To Give Movie Benefit For Poor

Merchants of Mill street, are planning a moving picture benefit to be given in the Forrest theatre on the evening of November 22nd. The proceeds of the show are to be devoted to the poor and needy of Bristol.

There will be a number of feature reels of the latest in moving pictures. The support of the townspeople is solicited as the money is for a most worthy cause.

Masquerade Dance

Tonight a masquerade dance will be held in the social session hall of the Elks Home.

Legion Endorses Speech Of Their Commander

Members of Robert W. Bracken Post, No. 382, American Legion, have placed themselves squarely on record as endorsing the remarks made by their commander, Franklin Gilkeson, at the Bristol cemetery last Sunday afternoon.

The Legion held a meeting on Tuesday evening and during the transaction of the rountine business, the address of Commander Gilkeson was brought up for discussion.

In his remarks at the burial of Private Russell T. Delker last Sunday afternoon, Commander Gilkeson unmercifully flayed the slacker, the individual who crawled to the shipyards to escape the war and those who in any manner shirked their duty as American citizens. The address of Mr. Gilkeson was a stinging rebuke and one which cut deep into the conscience of the guilty. It brought forth much favorable comment.

At the Legion meeting Tuesday night a motion was made that the address be endorsed by the Legion members and that a vote of confidence and endorsement be given Mr. Gilkeson for making such a fine and patriotic address. The motion carried without a dissenting voice.

Plan Banquet

The Ushers Association of the Methodist Church will hold a banquet on the evening of November 3rd.

Workers in the Vineyard Gather for S. S. Convention

Bucks County Sunday School Association Will Assemble in Presbyterian Church Tomorrow For a Two Day Session.

Sunday school workers and church folks from all over the county, and from Philadelphia and other places, will flock to Bristol tomorrow to participate in the opening of a two-day convention of the Bucks County Sabbath School Association. The convention will be held in the Presbyterian Church. Notable speakers are scheduled to address the convention during its session.

Among them will be Dr. Edwin C. Broome, Superintendent of the Philadelphia Public schools; Dr. J. S. Armentrout, of Philadelphia, Superintendent of the Teacher Training Department, Presbyterian Sunday School Board; Wallace F. Gerhart, of Telford County Superintendent of the Teacher Training Department; Rev. R. A. Bausch, of Sellersville, County Superintendent of the Young People's Division; Dr. Paul S. Leinbach, of Philadelphia, editor of "the Reformed Church Messenger" W. G. Landes, general secretary of the Pennsylvania Sunday School Association; Dr. Chas. Peters, of Philadelphia, Director of Religious Education, of the Reformed Church in the United States; Walter E. Myers, of Erie, Superintendent of the Adult Division of the Pennsylvania Sunday School Association; Miss Elsie Scheetz of Sellersville, County Superintendent of the Elementary Division.

The address by Superintendent Broome, of the Philadelphia public school system, on "Who is Responsible for the Child's Moral Training?" which will be delivered on Saturday morning, will be a feature of the convention.

The Fellowship Supper, on Friday evening at 6 o'clock will also be a feature. To this supper all pastors of the county, Sunday school officers, district and county officers and all others attending the convention have been invited.

Another notable address will be that of General Secretary Landes, on "A Trip Around the World," which will be illustrated. Dr. Paul S. Leinbach, editor of "the Reformed Church Messenger," is also expected to make a notable address tomorrow afternoon on "Saving Civilization."

Three sessions will be held tomorrow and two on Saturday. The complete program for Friday's sessions is as follows:

Pennsy's Men Seem To Be With Company

Only Minority of Employees Would Probably Go Out on Strike

35,000 PLEDGE LOYALTY

Whatever the employees of other roads do, it does not appear as if the threatened strike, if it does come, will totally paralzye, or even have much effect on the Pennsylvania System.

More than 35,000 employes in the maintenance of way department of the Pennsylvania Railroad, have pledged allegiance to the company in the event of a strike.

A message from officials of the brotherhood of those employes has been received at the P. R. R. offices, saying the men have been instructed to ignore any strike and will continue to perform their own work.

The maintenance of way workers were included in the recent controversy between the Pennsy and the Railroad Labor Board over the question of union representation on joint committees to settle controversies. The dispute is still before the Labor Board argument on the points involved being scheduled for today in Chicago.

The message came from Wilmington, and says:

"We the officers of the Pennsylvania system division, United Brotherhood Maintenance of Way Employes, Railroad Shop Labor, assembled at Wilmington, wish to inform you that we are taking no part in the proposed strike and will notify the employes on the Pennsylvania system covered by our regulations to remain on their jobs and perform their own work.

The telegram was signed by L. I. Kennedy, general chairman; F. B. Collier J. T. Redmond, C. B. O'Flanagan, C. L. Hawkins, D. S. Redmon, J. F. Owen, C. A. Reigel W. T. Haines, J. H. Doney W. H. Kane, and W. C. Weaver.

Slight Fire

A slight fire in the basement of the Radcliffe street residence of Joseph R. Grundy, last night, was the means of summoning the firemen. Some debris in the cellar caught fire.

The consistory of St. John's Reformed Church, Lebanon, declined to accept the resignation of the pastor, Rev. John N. LeVan.

N. J. Trolley Fare Goes Up Today

Burlington and Other Towns Paying Eight Cents for Each Zone

GIVE REFUND SLIPS

Trolley riders in Burlington today are paying an eight cent fare as is being done in other sections throughout New Jersey, where the street railway lines are operated by the Public Service Corporation. An eight cent fair and one cent for a transfer is being collected today.

Motor busses started today doing a brisk business but there was no boycotting of the trolleys as was threatened. Several passengers on the cars made complaints about the increase.

Four rides are given for thirty cents small round tokens resembling a dime being sold instead of tickets. The old fare was seven cents and two cents for a transfer.

The trolley company is deprived of the immediate use of the extra funds by a ruling of the U. S. District Court at Trenton, which permitted the new fare to be collected until the matter is finally passed upon by the U. S. Supreme Court. Scores of cities throughout the State are fighting the increased rate.

Because of the ruling, conductors are handing out to each passenger a small card reading: "The Public Service Railway Company has received from the passenger to whom this receipt is issued eight cent as a fare and is odliged to refund or to pay to bearer one cent upon surender hereof provided the rates of fare premitted by the U. S. District Court for the District of New Jersey are not sustained on final hearing. It is signed by Thomas N. McCarter, president of the company.

Oddly enough, if the Supreme Court overrules the District Court and orders the seven cent fare reinstated, the company will be worse off than if it had kept the seven cent fare, because it will have to refund one cent for each refund slip issued. Since the great bulk of the passengers will pay thirty cents for four rides, or seven and a half cents a ride, instead of eight, the refunding of one cent would net the company but six and a half cents per passenger, instead of the seven received under the old order.

Hotel Man Calls A Halt on State Diverting Road

Enjoins Highway Department From Changing Doylestown-Easton Route

INJURES HIS PROPERTY

Other Court Affairs Coming Before Judge Ryan at County Seat

Preliminary injunction has been granted by Judge William C. Ryan to Claude A. Trauger, proprietor of the Ferndale Hotel, temporarily restraining the State Highway Department from reconstructing the Doylestown-Easton highway along a new road east of the hotel, instead of following the present route of the road.

Mr. Trauger complains that his property will be irreparably damaged and that neither the State nor the contracting firm has taken the prerequisite action of making an effort to enter into an agreement and fix the amount of damage.

It is alleged that by changing the course of the road for the purpose of lessening dangerous features, increased drainage will pass under and through the hotel dwelling, make it totally untenable and destroy the water right and pipe line of the owner.

The allegation is made that the State's action is not within the powers given it by the Act of 1911, which empowers it to change the direction of a road, and that the proceeding prescribed by the Act of 1917, requiring the County Commissioners to enter into an agreement with the owner to fix damages, if possible, has not been followed.

At the point in question there is a very dangerous turn in the road around one corner of the hotel. The plan is to continue the road straight over the hill and avoid this turn.

The preliminary injunction is to continue for five days.

The first case called for trial yesterday necessitated taking the jury to Newtown to look over the site in the case in dispute involving a suit for damages over a water course. The plantiff is Milton D. Ritter, of Newtown and the defendants are: James A. Dafter, Jennie Y. Watson, Estner M. Watson, Carl B. Watson, Martha A. F. S. Watson and George A. Hill, all of Newtown.

The case of Samuel Bell & Sons, a corporation under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, against Reuben S. Clymer, individually and trading as Clymer Feed and Milling Company ,was reported settled Wednesday morning.

Court adjourned at noon until this morning.

Lumber Yard Resident Lost His Pants And His Roll

Eugene Leiper, who resides at the lumber yard of the H. K. Paxon Lumber Company, south of Bristol Borough limits, is mourning the loss of a pair of pants and $120 in cash.

Leiper and his wife retired at their usual hour on Sunday evening. They occupy a room on the first floor as sleeping quarters. Nothing out of the ordinary was noticed before the couple retired.

Leiper hung his trousers beside his bed on a chair. In the pocket was the $120 in cash. When he awoke on Monday morning both pants and money were gone. There is no clue remains as to the thief.

Brest Mob Attacks American Consulate

A number of windows were broken by flying missils. Police were rushed to the scene and restored order. A police guard was placed about the building.

"Release Sacco and Vanzetti" shouted the mob. The consulate was bombarded with stones.

It took the police nearly an hour to disperse the infuriated demonstrators. A number of persons were slightly injured. The ringleaders were arrested.

HOME BUILDING NEXT YEAR

News garnered from cities, towns and villages in many States seems to warrant hope that building of homes will be started generally on a large scale next spring. Local loan associations are being formed in numerous places, and realtors and contractors announce their intention to build houses and sell them at reasonable terms.

Once the home-building and home-owning movements get under headway, it will not be long before the housing shortage is overcome. Dissatisfaction with high rents and unpleasantries of tenancy are actual incentives which will, no doubt, induce families to own their abodes.

There is now a set of most convincing talking-points to encourage home ownership. Renters have learned that it is neither cheaper nor so agreeable to pay rent, and that they can save money and live more comfortably and independently in their own dwellings.

Home-owning is one of the best methods of saving money. Under the most unfavorable circumstances, it is economical. And members of a family always take more interest in their home, and feel more self-assurant, more confident and more respectable than in a rented house.

Heretofore, there has prevailed an idea that it was hardly worth while to invest money in a house. Now that there is a different point of view, home-ownership propaganda should be more vigorous. And it is quite important that, when dwellings are purchased on an amortization plan, the installments themselves should be made low enough to be strong inducements. The problem with many who would like to own homes is the first capital payment. It should be made as small as possible, and the amortization period prolonged.

NUMBERS AND MAIL BOXES

The Post Office Department is taking steps to have all houses plainly marked with street numbers and mail-boxes installed where they will be convenient for postmen.

This is a movement in which the public should cooperate heartily with the postmasters. The cost of street numbers and mail-boxes is but a trifle. It is worth fifty cents to have a house numbered and a mail-box handy, as delivery of mail will be expedited considerably.

Think it out for yourself. Your house ought to be numbered, anyhow, so that visitors may find you without trouble. If you have a mail-box, the postman will not take your letters back to the postoffice, should you happen to be out, but will deposit them in the receptacle.

HOOP DRESS IS IN FASHION AGAIN

The balloon skirt of fifty years ago is on display in the shops of London. And if Fashion decrees that it is stylish, and should be worn, why there is no doubt that the darling ladies will hail it with delight and don it. After half a century it is a novelty.

The new crinoline is adjustable. By means of tape hinges, the wearer may manipulate the wire construction, forming the hoops, so that the crinoline spreads four to six inches, or so that the hoops collapse and the skirt flattens.

How could a woman turn around in an efficiency-apartment room with a non-adjustable hoop skirt? Or, how enter a street-car? Should the adjustable hoop-skirt become stylish, ladies will be jerking the tape hinges to make themselves larger or smaller. But that will be no trouble. It will suffice to be in style.

LANDIS HAS NO MONOPOLY

In many of the problems which Judge Kensaw Mountain Landis will have to solve, or undertake to solve, as supreme commissioner of baseball, human nature will be a more important issue than the letter or spirit of the law. Problems in which the temperament of players is interspersed will be more satisfactorily adjustable by persuasion than by mandate.

The defiance of Judge Landis's order by Babe Ruth apparently is an instance of this kind. Ruth says that he and his colleagues had as much right to play as Sisler of the St. Louis Browns and others, whom the supreme commissioner permitted to take part in exhibition games, or, who, at least, were not forbidden to play. Ruth says, too, that he telephoned to Judge Landis, and the latter twice hung up the receiver.

There are two sides to the question as to whether star players should be allowed to play in post-season exhibition games. There is law on each side, as well as the matter of the national game's popularity.

The services of a player belongs to his team, and he is supposed to take every precaution, between seasons, to keep in perfect trim. On the other hand, he is at liberty at the close of the season, and may maintain that playing in exhibition games is the best sort of practice. Ruth states that the appearance of well-known players in minor-league towns tends to popularize baseball. On the other hand, unless their engagements were subject to approval by their managers, or some authority, questionable practices might arise which would be detrimental to baseball.

EXPECT SOMETHING, BUT NOT TOO MUCH

President Harding reiterates that it is inopportune to talk of complete disarmament. His object is, unquestionably, to spare the public some disappointment. He does not wish them to expect too much from the forthcoming conference. In taking this position he is right.

There are three substantial reasons why complete disarmament is impossible. First, there are portents of strife in the Balkans, where the great war was started. Second, affairs are still unsettled all over the world. And third, the world-powers distrust one another, and a few of them probably would not scruple at making the most of a profitable situation.

President Harding might go a little farther, and still be a reliable prophet. It is more than likely than there will be no agreement for any disarmament, or for but slight disarmament. However, much progress will be made if a rational and solid agreement for limitation of armament is reached.

Nevertheless, it is advisable for advocates of peace to keep up their propaganda for complete diarmament. If much is demanded, a better compromise may be effected.

Complete disarmament could not be brought about suddenly. The nations are used to carrying guns, and they, like individuals who imagine they are unsafe unless they tote firearms, must be trained to pacific ways. Limitation of armament will be a gratifying beginning.

Have you noticed how still that still case has become and how still it remains?

It is about time that someone explained to "Judge" Yerkes the difference between a police officer and a constable. Is'nt it queer how such an intelligent man permits himself to speak in country dialect.

The ways of a lawyer are peculiar. Howard I. Are the Stories of Strange South American Native Cures True?

By DR. HENRY H. RUSBY, Columbia University.

Will we scientists sailing for Chili bring back with us, when we come out of the Colombian wilderness after two years of exploration, some precious medicinal plant, growing obscurely now on the mountain peaks of Bolivia or among the jungles of western Brazil?—some other plant as priceless, therapeutically, as the cinchona shrub of the Andes whose bark gives us quinine; or the root of the ipecacuanha, brought long ago from Brazil?

These questions can be answered only by conjectures. Are the stories of strange native cures true? That's just what we are going to try to find out. For myself, I believe that unquestionably the South American Indians understand the medicinal uses of rare plants which are unknown to our materia medica.

Superstition, witchcraft, legend are so entangled with their actual and beneficial powers that a white man cannot hope to get at the truth of the thousand tales he hears except by long study. If among all the miracle we can find a few real remedies, that will be as much as I expect

Another day or two went by in the silent, rain-wrapped house under the trees; days of quiet footsteps and whispering, and the lisping of wood fires. Then Martin suddenly was conscious, knew his life, languidly smiled at her, thanked the doctors for occasional ease from pain.

"Peter—I'm sorry. It's terrible for you—terrible!" he said in his new, hoarse, gentle voice, when he first saw Peter. They marveled among themselves that he knew that Alix was gone. But to Cherry, in one of the long hours that she spent sitting beside him and holding his big, weak, strangely white hand, he explained one day. "I knew she was killed," he said, out of a silence. "I thought we both were!"

"How did she ever happen to do it?" Cherry said. "She was always so sure of herself—even when she drove fast!"

"I don't know," he answered. "It was all like a flash, of course! I never watched her drive—I had such confidence in her!"

His interest dropped; she saw that the tide of pain was slowly rising again, and glanced at the clock. It was two; he might not have relief until four. In his own eyes she saw reflected the apprehension of her own.

"You might ask Peter to play some of that—that rambly stuff he was playing yesterday?" he suggested. Cherry, only too happy to have him want anything, to have him helped by anything, flew to find Peter. Busy with one of the trays that were really beginning to interest and please the invalid now, she told herself that the house was a different place, now that one nurse was gone, the doctors coming only for brief calls, and the dear, familiar sound of the old piano echoing through the rooms.

Martin came from the fiery furnace changed in soul and body. It was a thin, gentle, strangely patient man who was propped in bed for his Thanksgiving dinner, and whose pain-worn face turned with an appreciative smile to the decorations and the gifts that made his room cheerful.

The heavy cloud lightened slowly but steadily; Martin had a long talk, dreaded by Cherry from the first hours of the accident, with his physicians. He bore the ultimatum with unexpected fortitude.

"Let me get this straight," he said slowly. "The arm is O. K. and the leg, but the back—"

"I don't see why I should deceive you, my dear boy," said the younger doctor, who had grown very fond of him. "You can still beat me at bridge, you know, you can read and write, and come to the table, after awhile; you have your devoted wife to keep finding new things for you to do! Next summer now—a chair out in the garden—"

Cherry was fearfully watching her husband's face.

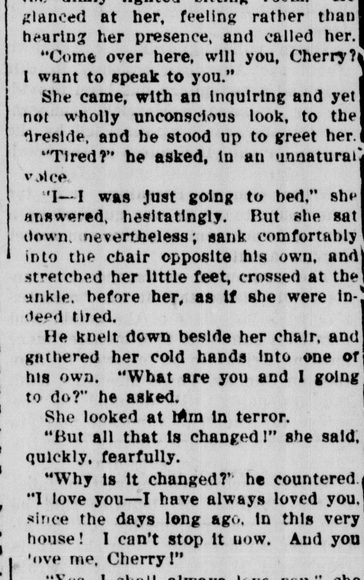

"We'll all do what we can to make it easy, Mart!" she whispered, in tears.

"Mind very much taking care of a helpless man all your life?" he asked, with a hint of his old confident manner.

"Oh, Mart, I mind only for you!" she said. Peter, standing behind the doctors, slipped from the room unnoticed.

Late that evening, when Martin was asleep, Cherry came noiselessly from the sick-room, to find Peter alone in the dimly lighted sitting room. He glanced at her, feeling rather than hearing her presence, and called her.

"O, Mart; I Mind Only for You!" She Said.

"Come over here, will you, Cherry? I want to speak to you."

She came, with an inquiring and yet not wholly unconscious look, to the fireside, and he stood up to greet her.

"Tired?" he asked, in an unnatural voice.

"I—I was just going to bed," she answered, hesitatingly. But she sat down, nevertheless; sank comfortably into the chair opposite his own, and stretched her little feet, crossed at the ankle, before her, as if she were indeed tired.

He knelt down beside her chair, and gathered her cold hands into one of his own. "What are you and I going to do?" he asked.

She looked at him in terror.

"But all that is changed!" she said, quickly, fearfully.

"Why is it changed?" he countered. "I love you—I have always loved you, since the days long ago, in this very house! I can't stop it now. And you love me, Cherry!"

"Yes, I shall always love you," she answered, agitatedly, after a pause in which she looked at him with troubled eyes. "But—but—you must see that we cannot—cannot think of all that now," she added with difficulty. "I couldn't fail Martin now, when he needs me so!"

"He needs you now," Peter conceded, "and I don't ask you to do anything that must distress him now. But in a few months, when his mother comes down for a visit you must tell them honestly that you care for me," he said.

Cherry was trembling violently.

"But how could I!" she protested. "Tell him that I am going away, deserting him when he most needs me!"

Peter had grown very pale.

"But—" he stammered, his face close to hers—"but you cannot mean that this is the end?"

She moved her lips as if she was about to speak; looked at him blankly.

Then suddenly tears came, and she wrenched her hands free from his, and laid her arms about his neck. Her wet cheek was pressed to his own, and he put his arms tightly about the little shaken figure.

"The Sons of Temperance Can Still Count on Me," —Says GEORGE SHEPPARD, SR.

After Fifty Years in Order, Thirty-nine Years in Bristol Division, and at 75 Years of Age, He is Not Retiring.

Bristol Division of the Sons of Temperance will tomorrow night celebrate, at its meeting place in Mohican Hall, the thirty-ninth anniversary of its founding, and on that occasion its only surviving charter member and founder will, after thirty-nine years of active service for the local division and the order, "step onto the side lines and watch the younger folks carry on the game."

So George Sheppard, Sr., puts it, but he is himself dubious as to whetner the other members of Bristol Lodge and of the order throughout the state and nation will consent to let him step onto the side lines and watch them play, without taking any further active part. They frankly say that they want their honored founder to round out a full forty years as an officer of Bristol Division,—and he has compromised with them by saying that, when there is any office that no one else will take in the division or order, he will consent to take it.

Though it is thirty-nine years since Mr. Sheppard organized Bristol Division, No. 107, S. of T. thirty-nine years does not represent his length of membership in the order. He has been a member for over fifty years.

"I joined the order in about 1870, in Troy, N. Y.," he said to a Courier man today, as he sat in his home at Dorrance street near Wood and reminisced of the order and of Bristol Division. I was rather a wild young fellow in those days, light hearted and happy, always laughing and fond of lively company, and I am sorry to say, inclined toward drinking. I was working in a factory up there, and one day a friend said to me; "George you're too good a fellow to be wasting your vitality and life by trying to get the better of the Demon Rum. You would make a fine member of an order I belong to, the Sons of Temperance. Why not join?" So I did, and I have been an active member ever since.

"I had only been in this country a couple of years then. I was born in London, the son of a clergyman of the Church of England, and, my father dying when I was two years of age, I was brought up by uncle. I got the fever to come to America and I came to Troy to live with a cousin. After a couple of years, I though I would go back—and that determination indirectly led to my coming to Bristol and to the foundation of Bristol Division.

"I started home and reached New York City, when the idea struck me that, at home in England, they had ridiculed me and said that I would be back inside of three years, and two had then only passed. So, as I was going up the steps of the steamship tiket office in New York, to buy my passage back to England, I saw a sign on the place next door; "Wanted, men to work in an iron foundry in Florence, N. J" I descendeed the ticket office steps and went in next door. They asked me if I had worked in an iron foundry, and being a bold lad and willing to try anything, I said that I had, though I never had.

"Well I came to Florence, one of 36 men sent from New York, and I was the only one who stayed, and I stayed there four years.

"In Florence I identified myself with the Sons of Temperance, and again became active in the order. Being a young fellow, I soon got to have acquaintances in Bristol and it was at a temperance meeting in Bristol that I first met the girl who afterwards became my wife, and who was, with me, the organizer of Bristol Division.

"After our marriage, however, we went to Philadelphia to live, where I worked in Disston's saw works, and still kept up my affiliation with the Sons of Temperance. Then we moved to Bristol and took up our permanent home here.

"It was on October 10th, 1882, that my wife and I and some others organized the Bristol Division, Sons of Temperance. Among those who were with us as charter members I recall were Mrs. Quicksell, wife of a captain of the river boats; Mr. Lovett, the father of Edward Lovett, the real estate man; William Hoot, then a school janitor, Mrs. Lindell.

"My wife, who died three years ago, was always a loyal worker for temperance, and, after she had joined the order through my interest in it, she was one of Bristol chapter Division's most earnest members until her death.

"Bristol Division started with about sixty members. At that time, women had just been admitted to full membership. Previously, they were admitted to meetings merely as "visitors," not having any say or active membership. The beneficial feature had been introduced into the order previous to Bristol Division's organization, however.

"The order,—by which I mean the whole body, national and state,—as well as Bristol Division, has always worked earnestly for prohibition and shared in the satisfaction that came with the passage of the Volstead law, though our order has never taken active part in political effort for any cause. We have always worked along temperance lines, but have accentuated our beneficial side more vigorously in seeking new members.

"During my identification with Bristol chapter, I believe we have initiated over 1200 members. I am the present worthy Patriarch of Bristol Division, which office I have held for five terms but expect to relinquish. My successor in that office will be Mrs. Minnie Hughes. The other officers at present are; Mrs. Charles Warwick, Past Worthy Patriarch; Charles Warwick, Recording Scribe; Harry Hughes, Financial Scribe; William A. Mohre, Treasurer; Mrs. Minnie Hughes, conductor; Miss May Smoyer, Assistant Conductor and James Guy, Sentinel.

'I have held high office in the Grand Lodge, the state body, in which I was Grand Worthy Associate. I could have held the highest office in the state body, that of Grand Worthy Patriarch, but I refused it.

"I feel, now, however, that I deserve a rest from active duties, though I will continue a more or less active member of the order and of Bristol Division as long as I live and am able. I am in my 75th year, but I expect to live for some years longer. I want the "young blood" to take the reins more, in Bristol Division, while I sit on the side lines, ready to give any help that is necessary.'

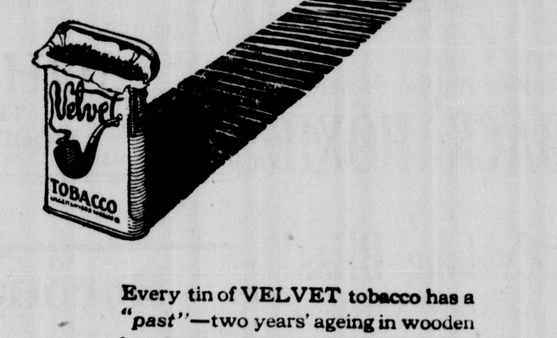

Mr. Sheppard's appearance gives foundation to his expectation of living for some years longer though he is past the allotted three-score-and-ten of man. He is remarkably well preserved for his age, and is a corroboration of the theory that abstinence from spirituous liquors causes longevity.

For the past thirty-five years of his life, Mr. Sheppard has worked for the D. Landreth Seed Company in Bristol, and is still actively engaged.

It has been put up to the courts to say whether a man's house is his brewery as well as his castle.

No friction yet in the Anglo-Irish powwow, but the shillalahs and brickbats are within easy reach.

Your Very Best Wealth

One day some men were talking about the good and the bad investments they had made. They all agreed that it was not so easy to make the best use of one's money—that mistakes are easy to make.

One of the men said:

"The best part of my wealth is not an investment at all. My farm and my Liberty Bonds are all right—I am glad I have them, but those are fixed investments and the profit from them is best when I hold on to them."

"The very best part of my wealth is that part which will serve me quickest and in the largest variety of ways.

"The money I have in the bank is my Very Best Wealth because it is always ready to answer my call no matter what I want to do."

The Game Laws

Editor Courier:
Sir;—

Regardless of the fact that a great deal of publicity has been given to changes in the game laws during the last six months. I hope you will publish this letter as a warning to all sportsmen that no seasons for game of any kind open on October 20th as heretofore; instead, the season for rabbits, squirrels, wild turkeys, ruffed grouse, ringneck pheasants, quail etc., opens on Tuesday, November 1st. The season for bears and the balance of fur-bearing animals (raccoon season opened October 1st) will also open November 1st.

On the back of every hunter's license is a complete summary of the new seasons, bag limits, etc., and every licensee should carefully read both sides of his license before going hunting.

As the law now stands, it is absolutely necessary for every licensed sportsman to carry his license on his person and to display his license tag on the outer garment on the middle of the back at all times while hunting. Sportsmen must not forget to countersign their license as it is not valid until signed. The penalty for failure to carry the license or display the tag is $20.00.

The Game Commission by a recent Act of Assembly is given the power to revoke hunters' licenses for periods of one to five years for violation of the game laws, carelessness with firearms, destroying personal property on lands on which licensees are hunting, etc. All true sportsmen are requested to see to it that the game laws are obeyed at all times and that hunters appreciate the fact that the land owners of the State are their hosts and govern themselves accordingly.

Shooting a person in mistake for game while hunting is now punishable by fines from $100.00 to $1000.00 and imprisonment from 1 year to 5 years, also refusal to grant a license for 2 years to 10 years.

Shooting with bullets in the hunting territory during the upland game season, except at legal birds or animals or targets protected by a natural or an artificial barrier so that the bullet can not go more than 15 yards beyond the target aimed at, is punishable by a fine of $25.00 for each shot fired.

Persons hunting together for large game must keep a roster of the camp or hunting party on which the name, address and license number of each member of the party is given. Large game killed must also be tagged within 6 hours after killing, with the name, address and license number of the party killing same and the location where same was killed.

The distribution of the pamphlet containing the Game, Fish and Forest Laws cannot be made until about November 1st. because of the printer's strike last summer which delayed all State printing. With the splendid assistance of the newspapers of the State, we have been able to largely overcome this serious handicap, and the people of the State are quite thoroughly familiar with the changes of the law of which the above are the most important.

Respectfully yours,
SETH E. GORDON
Secretary, Game Commission

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action yet always effective. They bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

THEATRES

Forrest Theatre

Another Jack Hoxie feature is coming to the Forrest Theatre tonight. It is called "Cyclone Bliss" and is the second picture in this series featuring this western star. "Cyclone Bliss" has many thrills but in addition to this it is a well made western picture, with some big sets and great acting.
